PER 308: Rural Isolation and Quarantine for Public Health and Healthcare Professionals

This course expands on concepts introduced in MGT 433, and consists of two customized training modules specifically tailored toward course participants in the public health and medical fields. In this course, participants will become familiar with guidance that assists communities in planning for isolation and quarantine (I&Q), such as the National Response Plan and its implications in the healthcare community. Successfully completing MGT 433: Isolation & Quarantine for Rural Communities is a prerequisite for attending PER 308.

Registration Deadline: October 22, 2014

Please use the links below to register for both courses MGT 433 and PER 308. You will need to click on both links to register for each course separately.
